Q4

To reach our collective potential, we must work together to build up Ottawa. That requires a council in which each member commits to city wide leadership. What is your intended approach to collaboration with council, city staff and economic partners?

Working together is my campaign slogan because I am committed to this belief. Collaboration and consensus building are essential to good governance, and no part of our city or anyone in it should be left behind by policy decisions. Partnering with not only council and staff, but the federal and provincial governments, the NCC and Gatineau, businesses, community associations, developers, and non-profits is a requirement to building an Ottawa that we can all be proud of. I intend to engage everyone, build relationships, find compromises, and where compromise proves impossible, trade wins so that competing interests can take turns succeeding. I also intend to clearly define and communicate the city's vision - that Ottawa can be an affordable home with complete communities, a sustainable and diverse economy, and a world-renowned capital city. - and champion the efforts that move us toward that objective.

Q5

What key characteristics and skills do you possess that make you a great leader and ambassador for the city of Ottawa, and the national capital region?

I have lived each of Ottawa's major lifestyles - rural, suburban, and urban - and I understand and recognize the value in each. I have experience in lower levels of politics, in academic, political, and non-profit governance, and leadership history across a diverse set of roles. Most of all, I have an incredible passion for this city - I love it, I know what makes it great, and I want everyone else to know it too.

Q6

What are your top three priorities for Ottawa's future?

To improve Ottawa's housing affordability, economic diversity and sustainability, and global reputation.
