Q4

To reach our collective potential, we must work together to build up Ottawa. That requires a council in which each member commits to city wide leadership. What is your intended approach to collaboration with council, city staff and economic partners?

The Mayor is the leader of Council and is expected to set a visionary agenda for the term of Council. My priorities are Transit, Housing and Public Safety, all within a fiscally responsible framework. I intend to find common ground with the other members of Council by presenting concise challenges and seeking collaborative and positive engagement. I have every expectation that Council shares the same concerns that I have and I look forward to a robust next term of Council. Additionally, I see the next Council providing far more precise and focused guidance to city staff. This will have the beneficial effect of making the direction from Council clear and precise while also setting up measurable criteria to determine the degree of success for each City initiative.

What key characteristics and skills do you possess that make you a great leader and ambassador for the city of Ottawa, and the national capital region?

I've had a wonderful 40 year career in business working with national and international clients. This plus the years of working closely with all levels of government allows me to provide both a high-level and detailed level of guidance as the next Mayor. I have a vision of a robust and vigorous Ottawa that is affordable, safe, convenient and livable. I believe that vision will be compelling for our residents as well as our external partners.

Q6

What are your top three priorities for Ottawa's future?

The next Mayor must provide hopeful and firm leadership on the LRT file, must articulate a housing vision that sees more housing being built while also providing an entry-level housing option and, there must be a long-overdue focus on improving public safety throughout Ottawa.
