Ward 12 - Rideau-Vanier

Q4

To reach our collective potential, we must work together to build up Ottawa. That requires a council in which each member commits to city wide leadership. What is your intended approach to collaboration with council, city staff and economic partners?

To have regular meetings and consultation with businesses and business owners to identify the main problems that beset the business community. These meetings would address challenges in urban development, security, and Canadian business innovation potential.

Q5

What key characteristics and skills do you possess that make you a great leader and ambassador for the city of Ottawa, and the national capital region?

I believe that I am forthright, confident, and thoughtful. I have over two decades of international experience in business, education, and intercultural communication. With these comparisons in mind, and a frank approach to addressing the city's shortcomings, I am able to help Ottawa become the world capital that it has the potential to be.

Q6

What are your top three priorities for Ottawa's future?

1. To address the high-density downtown of non-profit services that foster vagrancy and homelessness.
 2. To approach development in a more integrative capacity and holistically, taking into account not only the regrettable short-termism of high-rise construction, but finding a co-beneficial balance between community needs and business projects, such as climate-emergency contingency cooperation.
 3. To establish more sorely-needed pedestrian zones, especially in the Byward market area, and implement landscaping solutions that foster greenery, shade, and cultural attractions.
