Ward 17 - Capital

Q4

To reach our collective potential, we must work together to build up Ottawa. That requires a council in which each member commits to city wide leadership. What is your intended approach to collaboration with council, city staff and economic partners?

The approach I will take is one that has served me well throughout my career: to consult, collaborate, and compromise in order to build consensus. It's important for the City that its councillors view the City as a whole rather than individual wards. There can be no room for NIMBYism. Ottawa will only achieve its potential if its council and mayor are unified.

Q5

What key characteristics and skills do you possess that make you a great leader and ambassador for the city of Ottawa, and the national capital region?

In my career in the public service I had the privilege of being mentored by great leaders and have learned the value of service to one's community. In serving two Government House Leaders, I learned to consult, cajole, communicate and cooperate with large, diverse groups representing disparate interests. These are the skills that are needed at City Hall now.

I have lived in and loved Ottawa for 48 of the past 50 years. I will be an enthusiastic and energetic advocate and ambassador for the whole capital region.

Q6

What are your top three priorities for Ottawa's future?

1. To address and make meaningful progress on improving our citizens' mental health by partnering with stakeholders and all levels of government;
 2. To be a leading voice at Council to ensure that all the City's decisions are made through a climate change lens;
 3. To work with all stakeholders to expand and improve our transit and transportation network and work to correct the problems that have been identified with the LRT. While it's helpful to learn from past mistakes, I am focused on the future.
